It is to be expected that the evidence will disclose many striking, picturesque and instructive facts with regard to a series of the boldest acts ever performed in our leading stock warket. The career of Ives was in all respects phenomenal. Nobody knew then and nobody knows now by went means he was able to do what he cid. He was a mystery from the beginning, and a mystery he yet remains. For a man of his age-he is now only 25it may fairly be said that he is without a parallel. At 19 he was an officeboy with a salary of $6 a week; at 23 he failed with obligations amounting to $17,000,000. He seemed to have the science of pools and corners and syndicates at his finger-ends, and the oldest and shrewdest operators stood aghast at his andacity and fertility. His first big deal was so outrageous that even the calloused morality of the Stock Exchange was shocked, and the transactions were declared void. But he coolly sacrificed his partner to appease the demands of his accusers, and went on planning other and still
